FACULTY OF LAW

Masterclass Certificate Course on ‘Interplay of Law and Economics in the Contemporary World’

Organized by

Centre for Law, Economics and
Competition Policy (CLECP)
Faculty of Law,
Jagran Lakecity University

About the Masterclass Certificate Course

The contemporary world requires a great amount of attention to the interdisciplinary study and analysis of concepts. Law and economics are two such fields that have significant global importance and exhibit an interplay that needs to be studied in order to gain insights into the dynamics of the legal system and economic principles. Economic analysis of law allows academicians, experts, and practitioners to interpret the existing policy frameworks and cultivate an interest in interdisciplinary research. Keeping in mind the need for understanding the theme of law and economics and reflecting on its influence, this Masterclass Certificate Course is designed to provide a comprehensive view of this interdisciplinary concept. The course will be facilitated by speakers from academia, industry, and regulatory institutions on a range of topics to provide a substantial understanding of the interplay between law and economics.

Course Objectives:

1. To facilitate exposure to the inter- relationship between law and economics.
2. To teach by examples how to conduct economic analysis of laws.
3. To promote a culture of teaching, learning and research on the interplay of law and economics.

Learning Outcomes

Participants will be able to explain and assess the interplay of law and economics. Participants will understand the interdisciplinary application of law and economics in the contemporary world and can use the learning for research and academic endeavours.
