ABOUT
UNIVERSITY INSITUTE OF LEGAL STUDIES

Established in 2004–05 as a constituent department of Panjab University, the University Institute of Legal Studies (UILS) has steadily evolved into a centre of excellence in legal education, combining academic rigour with a forward-looking, research-oriented approach. Located in Chandigarh, the institute provides a dynamic intellectual space that encourages critical inquiry into contemporary legal and interdisciplinary issues.

In line with the spirit of the UILS Student Law Review (USLR), the institute actively promotes a culture of scholarly engagement and legal research. It encourages students to move beyond conventional classroom learning and contribute meaningfully to academic discourse on evolving legal challenges. The emphasis on research writing, analysis of emerging jurisprudence, and exploration of socio-legal themes reflects the core objective of USLR-to create a platform for thoughtful, innovative, and impactful legal scholarship.

UILS fosters this research-driven environment through interactive pedagogy, seminars, conferences, and publication opportunities. Students are trained to approach the law not merely as a set of rules, but as a living instrument shaped by social, economic, and technological transformations. This approach aligns closely with the broader vision of USLR, which seeks to engage with contemporary themes such as constitutional developments, access to justice, human rights, and the intersection of law with society.

Through its commitment to experiential learning-particularly through structured academic writing, research projects, and publication initiatives-UILS ensures that students develop both analytical precision and a strong research foundation. This emphasis on scholarly expression equips students to engage critically with legal issues and contribute effectively to platforms like USLR, where ideas are debated, refined, and disseminated.

Rooted in the rich academic legacy of Panjab University, UILS continues to cultivate a generation of legal thinkers and practitioners who are not only professionally competent but also intellectually curious and socially conscious—qualities that lie at the heart of the USLR theme of advancing meaningful legal research and discourse.

UILS STUDENT LAW REVIEW (USLR)

The UILS Student Law Review (USLR) is a student-run academic journal of the University Institute of Legal Studies, Panjab University, Chandigarh. It is published bi-annually and serves as a peer-reviewed and referred platform fostering meaningful engagement with contemporary legal issues. It seeks to encourage critical engagement with evolving legal issues while promoting high standards of academic writing and research.

USLR welcomes submissions from students and scholars across institutions. The journal adopts an inclusive approach towards legal scholarship and does not confine itself to any branch of law. By providing space for diverse perspectives, USLR aims to facilitate meaningful discourse on legal, social, and policy-oriented questions. We publish a wide range of contributions, including scholarly articles, case analyses, legislative commentaries, and book reviews.

A defining hallmark of USLR is its student-driven editorial process. The student Editorial Board actively manages various stages of publication, including manuscript review, editing, and organizational management. This hands-on involvement not only upholds the journal's strict academic standards but also nurtures a culture of research and intellectual inquiry within the institution.

The journal's continued development and success are made possible only through the guidance and encouragement of the university's leadership and faculty. The editorial team expresses its sincere appreciation to our Patron, Prof. (Dr.) Meenakshi Goyal, Hon'ble Vice-Chancellor, Panjab University (Chandigarh), our Editor-In-Chief, Prof. (Dr.) Shruti Bedi, Director, University Institute of Legal Studies and our Editor, Prof. (Dr.) Bharat.
