The Preliminary and Quarter-Final rounds will be conducted virtually, while the Semi-Final and Final rounds will be held on campus.

The competition aims to promote academic excellence, critical thinking, legal reasoning, advocacy, and meaningful engagement with contemporary human rights and international humanitarian law issues. Under the overarching theme, "Can Human Rights Survive War? Sovereignty, Power Politics, and Accountability in Today's Conflicts," participants will critically examine the complex relationship between state sovereignty, human rights, international law, and accountability during armed conflicts.

The event will provide students with a platform to develop and demonstrate their legal research, public speaking, argumentation, rebuttal, and analytical skills while engaging with diverse perspectives on humanitarian intervention, international criminal accountability, war crimes, and the role of law in contemporary conflicts.

The competition will follow Oxford Style Debate Format, with each team comprising two participants from the same university or institution. It will consist of four rounds: Preliminary, Quarter-Final, Semi-Final, and Final.

We cordially invite the esteemed faculty members and committee members of CHRHL to grace this academic occasion with their presence and valuable support. Your guidance and encouragement will contribute significantly to the success of the competition and inspire students to engage in informed and constructive discourse on contemporary human rights and international legal issues.

THEME AND BACKGROUND OF THE COMPETITION

BACKGROUND:

International law promises that people keep certain rights even in the middle of war. Yet in many present-day conflicts, states rely on sovereignty and national security to resist outside scrutiny, powerful states are accused of acting or holding back according to their own interests, and international courts are accused of applying the law unevenly. Whether the promise holds, and who is to answer when it does not, are open questions on which thoughtful people disagree. That disagreement is what makes the theme suitable for debate.

WHAT WE EXPECT FROM SPEAKERS:

1. Arguments should be based on international law, state practice, and credible evidence, so that the debate is decided on reasoning rather than loyalty to any side of a conflict.

2. Speakers should treat victims, communities, and states with respect, as the subject concerns real human suffering.

3. The Competition takes no position on any conflict, state, or government. Every view expressed belongs to the speaker alone.

Topics of All Rounds

Theme:

"Can Human Rights Survive War? Sovereignty, Power Politics, and Accountability in Today's Conflicts."

1. Preliminary Round	This house believes that state sovereignty should not override international human rights obligations during armed conflict.
2. Quarter-Final Round	This House believes that humanitarian intervention is driven more by political interests than by genuine humanitarian concern.
3. Semi-Final Round	This house believes that international institutions like the ICC are effective in deterring war crimes.
4. Final Round	Confidential until the Semi-Final results.
